PRESIDENT'S FLYBOX-

SCOTT
OLSON

STALKING THE BIG BOYS

Trout fishing can be deceptive, especially for the fly fisherman who mainly pursues them in our beautiful, but mostly small, Sierra streams. Although the fish in those small runs and riffles tend to be on the petite side they still fight like the dickens when they are hooked and with a properly sized rod they can give one quite a ride.

With that said the stalking of larger fish in more challenging environments should not be ignored or passed over lightly. Hooking, fighting and landing a 22" plus brown or rainbow trout on a medium sized river running at 250 CFS with a 5 wt. rod with 6x tippet and a size 20 nymph is a thrill and a challenge combined although not always easily achieved.

That is the situation that I and fellow members Joe Callewaert, Mike Bereny and Charley Beals found ourselves confronted with recently when we fished the Owyhee River in eastern Oregon. For those of you not familiar with the Owyhee it is a tail water fishery that receives its flows from the Owyhee reservoir and generally runs around 130 CFS or so in September when we make our annual trek there, so it was slightly disconcerting when we arrived this year to flows over 260 CFS (we had been informed that the flow was supposed to have been reduced to 118 CFS).

The Owyhee under normal circumstances is a challenging river to wade with poor water clarity and lots of odd sized rocks and boulders to negotiate and along with 260 CFS flows it can be downright dangerous to life and limb. You have to pick your spots carefully and then plan and execute your wading and stalking accordingly, if not you may take an unexpected and very cold bath.

But the payoffs can be extraordinary. We consider a small fish on the Owyhee to be around 15 inches with most fish in the 18" to 22" range and 4 to 5 pounds. These fish are expert at using their weight and the current against you and the fact that they mostly feed on mayfly nymphs in sizes 18 to 24 makes it that much more difficult to fight and land them. But oh when you do hook and land one the payoff is worth the wait. It is not unusual to have to fight a fish for 10 to 15 minutes before they are worn out enough to net and don't make the mistake (like I did my first year) of taking your normal small stream trout net as these fish will not fit in them. I've lost more than one trophy that way.

This year was tough fishing with our first two days very disappointing, although everyone caught fish, however the third day made up for all with everyone having a banner day especially in the late afternoon when each of us caught several very large fish. I highly recommend trying the Owyhee River or other rivers like the Madison in Montana for a larger trout fishing experience.

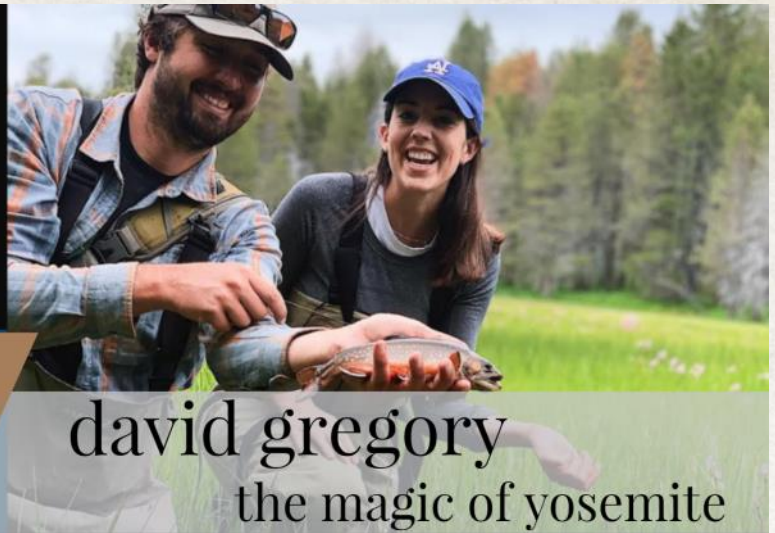

Tight lines and fighting fish to all!

david gregory
the magic of yosemite

YOSEMITE IS A CROWN JEWEL OF AMERICA'S NATIONAL PARKS.

Its iconic waterfalls and rock landscapes captivate millions of visitors a year. The majority of these tourists barely scratch the surface.

ASTUTE ANGLERS will find some 250 fish bearing lakes and countless miles of rivers and creeks to explore. Approximately 95% of the parks 1200 square miles are pristine wilderness and a must-fish for any California angler. The area gets less attention, and less fishing pressure than the better know Eastern Sierra.

OUR OCTOBER PRESENTER, DAVID GREGORY has for the past decade formed a deep connection to Yosemite and the cool crystal waters of the Merced River. A classic trout stream of extreme beauty that will leave you feeling hooked. His program will take you on an aquatic adventure on the Gold Country Rivers - the Merced, Tuolumne and the Stanislaus. The West Slope of the Sierra Nevada offers solitude, scenery, and year-round fishing. A five hour drive from Los Angeles will take you to the banks of the mighty Merced River. There is a reverence and irrevocable history in this section of the Merced River.

JOHN MUIR ONCE WROTE OF THE AREA "The place seemed holy, where one might hope to see God." When needing to escape, contemplate, or feel a deep connection to the natural world, head to the cool crystal waters of the Merced River. For the non-angler, the area includes the John Muir Trail, often called "America's most famous trail". It meanders through the second largest roadless area in the lower 48 and provides some of the best Alpine scenery this country has to offer.

NOT TO MENTION, DAILY OPPORTUNITIES TO CATCH WILD TROUT.

The trail's jaw dropping views and colossal mountains will leave you with a newfound appreciation for the Sierra Nevada.

David has a B.S. in Parks and Recreation Management and is a graduate of Clearwater Guide School. He is enthusiastically devoted to sharing his love of fly fishing and works as a fulltime guide with Yosemite Fly Fishers.

— FINDING — JOE BROOKS

A 90 MINUTE FEATURE LENGTH DOCUMENTARY

TWO BROTHERS IN A
QUEST FOR THE LEGACY
OF THEIR GREAT UNCLE.
A MAN WHO WAS ONCE
SPIRALING DOWNWARD
INTO THE TRAGIC DEPTHS
OF ADDICTION BUT THEN
FOUND HIS LIFE'S PASSION
AND TRANSFORMED
HIMSELF AS WELL AS AN ENTIRE SPORT.

To tell in vivid detail the exceptional life of the little known icon of American fly fishing. In his 71 years Joe Brooks lived three lifetimes. From his privileged youth to a broken alcoholic to one of the most revered sportsmen of his time, Joe's life is as complex as it is inspirational.

Few people manage to change themselves in any meaningful way.

But Joe did and, in doing so, he changed the world of fly fishing.
